LUXOMNI,

THE GEM OF Female Remedies, A PREPARATION

Simple, Safe, HARMLESS,

Bringing Health to Suffering Women.

Luxomni is recommended for all those distressing conditions incident to women. It is no liquid preparation containing ergot, chloral, and other hurtful narcotics, but a scientific combination of herbs and plants in package form, from which a simple tea is made, wonderful in its strengthening and toning influence. A powerful drug will no doubt relieve the most intense pain, but as soon as its effects die away, the trouble returns, and the patient derives no permanent benefit from the hurtful sedative. By the use of LUXOMNI, the whole system is strengthened and invigorated; it depends for its effect, upon properties derived from nature only, and none of the ingredients of which it is composed, is the least hurtful. The most delicate lady can use the preparation with confidence, and a strict adherence to directions for making and straining the tea, and taking the prescribed doses regularly, cannot fail to bring the most happy results.

In all ages of the world, and in all countries, the suffering of the parturient woman have even been a source of regret and sorrow, and have ever appealed to the sympathies of the human heart. Any remedy, therefore, or any means which promises to mitigate these sufferings, will be hailed as good news and glad tidings to all men.

The Barry Manufacturing company, of Atlanta, feel assured that they have such a remedy in the newly discovered agent—LUXOMNI.

TESTIMONIALS.

The proprietors are constantly receiving communications commending their preparation, and acknowledging its wonderful effects in relieving the sufferings of women, but from motives of delicacy, many decline the public use of their names. We are authorized to append a few, and we refer to a few others, which will suffice to show the drift of these letters, proving what great good LUXOMNI is doing, and what a great boon it is destined to become to suffering women.

Dr. Barry: I was afflicted for nine years with female troubles, of a most painful character, by which my health was broken down. All efforts made by different physicians, and the use of various remedies were of no avail. I had almost despaired of ever being cured, when I was advised to try LUXOMNI, and am now happy to inform you, that after three months use of the medicine, I am entirely relieved.

Mrs. M. J. FOWLER, Ringgold, Ga.

Dr. Barry—Dear Sir: For a long time I have been a sufferer from a complicated trouble and found no relief from my afflictions until I began the use of your excellent preparation, LUXOMNI. At first, had great doubts as to whether my condition would be benefited by its use, as there is a prejudice, not without foundation, toward all patent medicines. I was destined to be deceived, however, for from the first dose of tea my spirits began to revive, my strength gradually returned, and I can truly say that LUXOMNI has proven a boon to me.

Mrs. M. J. REYNOLDS, Kilgore, Texas.

Dr. Barry—Dear Sir: I, whose name is with held, and who had been a sufferer with womb troubles for a long while, writes: "I have tried your LUXOMNI, and find it has relieved me greatly. I feel better than I have felt for two years."

Dr. Barry—My daughter has suffered for several years with chlorosis. I have tried all kinds of medicines for the same, without much effect, until about four months ago, I commenced the use of your LUXOMNI, since which time she has been steadily improving, and I think, is about completely relieved. Very truly, T. A. GIBBS, McDonough, Ga.

Dr. Barry: Dear Sir—The lady whose case I brought to your notice, without knowing of your LUXOMNI, was promptly and greatly benefited by its use. The preparation was taken daily by her until after confinement, with the most satisfactory results. Its efficacy in her case, which involved much suffering, and awakened great anxiety and many fears for her life, is decided proof of its excellence.

REV. J. M. M. CALDWELL, Rome, Ga.

Barry Manufacturing Co.—Gentlemen: We have been selling your LUXOMNI for some time, and find that it has given entire satisfaction in every case. Some say they would not be without it for anything.

D. KNOTT & CO., McDonough, Ga.

Dr. Barry—From my own personal knowledge, I know LUXOMNI has proven a great success. I consider it a valuable remedy.

THE GREAT ENGLISH ESTATE.
Over 1,800 Members of the Sands Family in this Country have inherited $75,000,000.

NEW HUGO, May 18.—City Librarian Charles Es abroad has just returned from a meeting of the Sands family in New York. This family has inherited nearly $75,000,000 worth of property in England. It appears that in the sixteenth century Queen Elizabeth of England appointed the Rev. Edwin Sands as one of the translators of the Bible from the Greek, and in return for earnest work done made him archbishop of York. He possessed considerable property, which descended by hereditary to Captain James Sands. The latter at length declined to aid in supporting the Church of England and in 1633 came to America. His estate was confiscated to the English crown and so remained until four years ago, when parliament passed by an almost unanimous vote a bill dealing back to "legal representatives of the archbishop" the confiscated estate. In the meantime, owing to the enhanced valuation of property, the estate had grown to be worth a trifle less than $75,000,000.

Time had wrought many changes on this side of the ocean too. The name of Sands had been changed to Sands and it was to trace this family back to the original branch that Mr.
Estabrood had devoted much of his time and expended no little sum of money. He has thus succeeded in receipt of 1,800 descendants on the line and is in receipt of from three to twenty letters daily asking for information. He will probably publish the genealogy of the Sands family in book form.

In Lowell, Mass., where Hood's Sarsaparilla is made, there is more of this medicine sold than of all other blood purifiers. This is certainly a valuable home endorsement.

A Strange Case of Illness.
From the Calhoun Ga. Courier.
Dr. J. B. George, of this place, was called to attend Mr. W. J. Keel, who lives three miles from Leroy, on last Wednesday, and found Mr. Keel unconscious, the cause of his illness being most unusual. Last Monday, while Mr.
Keel, who is a great smoker, was cleaning out his pipe with his knife, he let the knife fall from his hand, and in falling the blade struck into the calf of his right leg, and by some means forced into the flesh up to the hilt.
The knife was extracted but the wound did not bleed a drop, not withstanding it was a deep one, and after it had been bled Mr.
Keel went to bed and went to sleep. Later in the evening he awoke from exhaustion and became completely unconscious, in which condition he has remained up to this writing, late Wednesday evening, and Dr.
George thinks the chances are very much against his recovery. Dr. George ascribes the peculiar phrase of Mr. Keel's illness to nicotine which was introduced into his blood along with the knife blade. This is a very unusual case.

DUMBLE'S ADVENTURE.

BY WALLACE P. REED.

For the Constitution.
"David Dumble, Boston, Mass., U. S. A."
When Mr. Dumble had written this legend on the greasy register of the Hotel Bolivar, the leading hestery in the city of Guatemala, he handed the landlord a package of valuable papers for safe keeping, and said that he would go to his room at once.

Mr. Dumble had arrived late at night, and feeling sleepy and travel worn, was in no mood for conversation. He felt that after a good night's rest he would be all the better able to look after the interests of his firm, the big coffee house of Bidgood & Co., of Boston.

The next morning the Bostonian was up with the sun, but to his inexpressible annoyance he found it somewhat difficult to make his toilet, as his garments were all missing.

"It is a blank, queer thing," soliloquized
Mr. Dumble, as he doctored about the room, carefully avoiding the windows. "I hung my clothes on that chair last night and now they are gone."

He looked around for a bell, but could find none. Then he opened his door and listened intently. Nobody was stirring in the house.
"Now, I am not going to stand this," said Mr. Dumble, "I am not going to stay in bed like those lazy Central Americans. I must have my morning walk."

He looked down at his hairy costume. Clearly it would not do to go out until he was dressed.
Sticking his head out of the door he yelled at the top of his voice:
"Hello! Waiter! Boy!"

No answer.
Mr. Dumble in his excitement walked out into the corridor and paraded up and down.
"I say!" he shouted, "Pedro, Sambo, Yum Yum, Jesus!"

"These names ought to bring some of them," he said, "but they don't seem to. Of course I can get some clothes when I see the landlord, but how am I to get them now?"

Just then Mr. Dumble noticed that the door of the room next to his chamber stood ajar.
Without considering the matter, he plunged in on a tour of investigation. In a moment he reappeared with an armful of clothing, and rushed into his own room, where he proceeded to inspect his plunder.

"They will fit," he remarked, "but what an outrageous rig it is! Gold lace, a sash and sword, and a cocked hat. I'll put on the things until I can do better."

When arrayed in his borrowed garb, Mr.
Dumble presented a very picturesque appearance. He was short and stout, with a red, jolly face, and his peculiar trappings were really becoming.

"Feel like a fool," said Dumble confidently to his reflection in the mirror. "These duds don't suit a bald-headed Boston man in the coffee trade. Am I a masquerade ball or a circus?"

Finding himself unable to answer the question, Mr. Dumble looked out of the window. There was no sign of life in the streets, and it was evident that Guatemala did not boast of an early rising population.

After some consideration Mr. Dumble decided that he would venture out for a walk.
On his return he would explain things to the landlord, and make it all right with the unknown owner of the fancy costume.

Of course, a man in a cocked hat and a gold-laced coat, with a sword dangling by his side, could not go skipping along in the jaunty style of the average commercial traveler. Mr.
Dumble saw this, and when he reached the street he started off at a dignified pace.

He was very much gratified to find that the few persons he met saluted him with great respect, but after a while he grew a little uneasy.

"There is something wrong," he muttered.
"This is no masquerade costume. It belongs to some high colonial fellow, some foreign minister, perhaps. The thing may get me into trouble yet."

However, he was in for it. The early morning air was so bracing and the quiet streets
so attractive that the Bostonian could not resist the temptation to prolong his stroll. He soon found himself in the residence part of the city, and as the sun climbed higher, the streets began to fill with people. All the promenaders and even those in carriages saluted the man in the cocked hat very deferentially.

"I am evidently somebody," thought Dumble, "but who in the mischief am I. If I could speak their jingling lingo tolerably well, I would ask for information."

It was now past breakfast time, but the distracted tourist was not aware of it. He was thinking of returning to the hotel, and wondering whether he had lost his way, when a carriage halted and an officer jumped out and took off his hat.

"I was on my way to the hotel," he said in good English, "but I see that your excellency is already on his way to the palace. The president will be delighted, but your excellency must not walk. Permit me," and taking the bewildered Dumble by the arm he pushed him into the carriage before there was time for remonstrance.

In spite of his cocked hat and sword, Dumble felt his knees shaking together. What could it mean? Was he about to be conducted into the presence of President Barrios?

During the next five minutes he saw everything through a haze. He was vaguely conscious of submissively allowing himself to be conducted from the carriage through spacious grounds into an imposing building where he found himself in a library, acknowledging in a confused way the greeting of a handsome, dark-faced, soldierly-looking man.

Mr. Dumble was now fully alive to the peril of his situation. There was nothing to be done but to act guardedly, and end the visit suddenly by pleading illness. For several minutes the conversation was purely general, and the visitor was still in the dark as to the real nature of the case. The president addressed him sometimes as "Your Excellency" and sometimes as "Sir John."

"He takes me for a Britisher," Dumble thought, "some envoy extraordinary or minister who has just arrived."

"Concerning the loan," said the president,
"what does your excellency suggest?"

Dumble broke out into a cold perspiration.
What loan? He was at sea. He could only stare stupidly at Barrios.

"Ah, I see," continued the president, smiling, "your excellency would first hear a proposition from me?"

"I—I think it would suit me better," replied the puzzled Bostonian.

"Very well," was the response. "I must tell you plainly that Guatemala cannot redeem the bond. Now this indebtedness should not be a matter of vital importance to your government, since it is due to private citizens, various bankers and capitalists of London."

"England has always protected her citizens in such cases," was Mr. Dumble's spirited reply.

"True," said Barrios, "and I admire your government for it, but if I tell you that the best we can do is to issue new bonds, running

ten and twenty years longer at four per cent,

do you not think—"

"Oh, yes," was the ready answer of the wretched impostor, "that is good enough. I am in favor of it."

"You are!" exclaimed the president. "Well,

Sir John, it appears to me that the whole business is settled."

What Dumble would have said, will never be known. Just at that moment a short, stout man in the plain dress of a citizen forced his way past the sentry at the door, and through the anteroom into the library. The instant his eye rested on Dumble he came near exploding with indignation.

"Mr. President," he yelled to Barrios, "that

—that scoundrel!"

"Silence, sir!" interrupted the president.

"Do not speak in that style!" Sir John Roscoe, the British envoy extraordinary,"

"But, Mr. President," responded the intruder, "I am Sir John Roscoe, and that fellow

there is a d-d Yankee bumming around in my court suit."

"Gentlemen!" cried Dumble, "allow me to explain."

"Mr. President, I must be heard," haughtily said Sir John. "I arrived late last night and stopped at the Hotel Bolivar. This morning

I found that my court dress had been stolen.

I was informed that this Yankee occupied the chamber next to my dressing room, and the fact that he was missing excited my suspicion. Now I find him here in the president's palace undoubtedly wearing my costume. Am I not warranted in demanding his arrest?"

Barrios turned toward the crest fallen Dum-
ble. His face was black with wrath, and he was about to say something severe when his private secretary rushed in."Mr. President," he gasped, "and you, gentlemen, I am just in time, I hope, with an explanation that will relieve all of us. The landlord of the Hotel Bolivar informs me that this gentleman, Mr. Dumble, was robbed of his garments last night. Waking early this morning he discovered with a start that he was wearing a suit belonging to Sir John Roscoe. Two or three hours later one of the servants who had been arrested on another charge confessed that he had robbed Mr. Dumble. The landlord took the liberty of reading the documents left with him by the American stranger, and learned from them that he was a gentleman of irreproachable character representing a Boston firm, favorably known in Guatemala. He at once made up his mind that Mr. Dumble had borrowed Sir John's clothes with the intention of pursuing the thief, and having seen that he was a stranger, not acquainted with our city and the customs of the country he feared—""But I see, Mr. President, that you and the other gentlemen begin to understand it. A word from Mr. Dumble—"The president was smiling, and Sir John showed a strong inclination to laugh."What you have heard," said Mr. Dumble, with a flushed face, "is all true. I wanted something to wear, you know. It was very early, and I could not stir up any body at the hotel. I found some clothes in an open room, and thought that I could wear them out in town for an hour or so, and by that time see my landlord and get everything straightened out. But I lost my way and was brought here, and I got so bothered and tangled up that I didn't know how to get out of the middle. I am certainly very sorry.""Ha! ha!" laughed the Englishman, "It is a good joke. My dear sir, don't say another word," and he shook hands cordially with the embarrassed American."I am afraid, Sir John," remarked the president, shaking with mirth, "that your views upon the bond question will not be as liberal as those of Mr. Dumble. We were settling the business very satisfactorily when you came in.""I think our business had better be deferred until tomorrow," suggested the envoy. "I must carry Mr. Dumble back to the hotel as my guest if he will honor me with his company.""Not until you both promise to dine with me tomorrow," quickly interposed Barrios.The jolly Briton and the Bostonian accepted the invitation, and in a few moments were on their way to the hotel in a most hilarious humor.The landlord of the Hotel Bolivar to this day astonishes his American guests with his wonderful yarns about the royal jamboree indulged in by Sir John Roscoe and Mr. David Dumble. It seems that the two vied with each other in painting
the town red during their stay in Guatemala, and according to all accounts it was done regardless of expense, and in a manner worthy of two extraordinary envoys.This medicine, combining Iron with vegetable tonics, quickly and completely cures Anemia, Indigestion, Weakness, Empire Blood, Malaria, Chills and Fever,

FIGHTING THE FLAMES.

FARMERS OF MICHIGAN TRYING TO CHECK THE FIRES.

New York, May 21.—About eight o'clock this morning, a fire occurred for the second time within a month in the church property of St. Stephen's parish, of which Dr. McGinn formerly had charge. The children had just concluded the devotional exercises of the morning at St. Stephen's house, number 145 and 147 Twenty-Eighth street, when flames were discovered in the basement. A fire alarm was rung, and a messenger hastened to sound an alarm while the children, panic-stricken, were quickly marshalled on the ground floor of the building by the sisters in charge of the institution. The fire was soon extinguished.

The bulkhead sky light was found to have been burned away from the cupola. Police
and firemen regard the affair with suspicion.
At the time, 160 children, ranging from three
to fifteen years in age, and sixteen or eighteen sisters were in the building. The sister who discovered the fire found that it started in a bundle of straw lying on the floor. A cupola
sky light of iron, which was broken by a child, allowed the flames to enter. The fire
was extinguished by the children, who were
quickly marshalled on the ground floor of the
building by the sisters in charge of the institution.

bundle of straw lying on the floor. A cupola
sky light of iron, which was broken by a child, allowed the flames to enter. The fire
was extinguished by the children, who were
quickly marshalled on the ground floor of the
building by the sisters in charge of the institution.

The bulkhead sky light was found to have
been burned away from the cupola. Police
and firemen regard the affair with suspicion.
At the time, 160 children, ranging from three
to fifteen years in age, and sixteen or eighteen
sisters were in the building. The sister who
discovered the fire found that it started in a bundle of straw lying on the floor. A cupola

LOCAL AID TO RAILROADS.

The Subject Over Which the People of Columbia are Agitated.

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 21.—[Special].—For about three months the people of Columbia township, in which the city of Columbia is located, have been thinking and talking about a proposition to subscribe $400,000 in bonds of the township, to the capital stock of the Columbia, Newberry and Laurens railroad company. The new road is to run hence to Newberry, afterwards making a connection with Laurens, to strike westward, opening an avenue to a country not now reached by the business men of Columbia. It was recently proposed to consolidate this road with the Spartanburg and Glenn Springs railroad, to run from Newberry to Glenn Springs, a popular summer resort, located in Spartanburg county. This consolidation will doubtless be effected soon.

It is not to be doubted that the building of the road will be of great advantage to Columbia.
Yet it took three months to get the names of a majority of the land owners in Columbia township to the position to the board of county commissioners, praying them to order the election. These names have at last been procured, and the election will be held on the 1st of June. Present indications are that the result will be in favor of the issuance of the bonds, for stock in the company.

GEORGE LAWSHE KILLED

A WELL KNOWN ATLANTA BOY MEETS A HORRIBLE DEATH.

The Champion Roller Skater of the South, While Playing on an East Tennessee Freight Train, Runs Into Him—Knocked off a Freight.

George Lawshe, an Atlanta boy well known throughout the country, who has been champion skater of the south, was killed yesterday morning about two o'clock at the Braswell station, on the East Tennessee road, about fifty-three miles from Atlanta.

Lawshe's death was terribly painful and horrible.
For the past two years he had been working on the East Tennessee road as a train hand, and by careful attention to his work established a reputation for reliability second to none on the road. On Tuesday last, Lawshe left Atlanta on a freight train having Chattanooga for its objective point.
The train was under charge of Conductor Vossburg, to whom Lawshe was well known, and by whom he was assigned to a position in the rear of the train. The trip to Chattanooga was made without incident or accident, and Friday the train started for Atlanta on schedule 27. It was a long train and with difficulty kept up with the schedule.
Lawshe was

THE REAR TRAIN HAND.
On the return trip as well as on the outward run,
and with the conductor kept the train protected from the following. About 1 o'clock Friday night the train reached Braswell station, where several cars were awaiting Conductor Vossburg's arrival. Just beyond the station from Atlanta is a long trestle about sixty feet high, and from the far end of the trestle the train was to start.
In approaching the trestle the train ran out of a deep cut and came to a short station on the trestle.
The cut is so deep that the train is almost entirely hidden from view by the trestle. The train was required to approach the trestle well under control of the engineer and slowly. Conductor Vossburg observed the train as it approached, and accurately that when his engine started up the curve he found it impossible to pull the load and came to a standstill with the rear end of the caboose.

ABOUT THE MIDDLE OF THE TRESTLE.
Several ineffectual attempts to climb the grade were made, and then the conductor ordered a train hand to cut the train in two. Then he signalled the engineer to pull out, at the same time instructing a train hand to cut the engine loose from the first portion of the train which it had climbed the grade and let it return for the rear end. The engineer found half of the train an easy load to move and his engine started moving. The driving wheels had made a dozen revolutions when the load began to drag and the engineer knew something was wrong. A shrill whistle from a hand caused him to look back and in looking back he observed a signal for him to stop. He stopped and found that the track had spread and that one of the cars was off the rails. Conductor Vossburg knew that passenger train.

NO. 11 WAS FOLLOWING HIM.
But by looking at his watch he ascertained that the train would not reach the trestle for more than an hour. In order to be safe, however, he returned to his cab, where he found Lawshe, to whom he said:
"George, a car's off the track up here. No. 11 is following us. Look out for her. I don't know how long it will take us to get on again. I don't know how long it will take us to get on again."
"All right, conductor," answered Lawshe. "Did you ever know me to fail?"
"No, I never did," replied the conductor, pulling
up his fine face and looking at Lawshe. "Did
you ever know me to fail?"
"No, I never did," replied the conductor, pulling
up his fine face and looking at Lawshe. "Did
you ever know me to fail?"

Conductor Vossburg then returned to the front section of his train, leaving Lawshe standing on the rear platform of the caboose with his lantern in hand. There he waited for some time, and then he saw a growing feeling in favor of ex-Governor Thompson for president of the South Carolina college, in case Dr. McBryde be not elected to recall his resignation.

RELEASING THE PRIESTS.
Father Keller Given His Liberty—Rejoicing Dublin.
DUBLIN, May 21.—The count of appeals has rendered a decision in the case of Father Keller, priest of Youghala, who is imprisoned in Kilmaham for refusing to testify regarding his connection with the plan of campaign. The court of appeals holds that the warrant for Father Keller's arrest was illegal and reverses the decision of the court of appeals.

ROUVIER WILL TRY IT.
The French Statesman Consents to Greys's Request.
PARIS, May 21.—M. Rouvier has consented to form a ministry. He hopes to induce leading members of the budget committee of the chamber of deputies to accept positions in the new cabinet.

COMMENT FROM BERLIN.
Copyright, 1887, by New York Associated Press.
BERLIN, May 21.—Pending the issue of the cabinet crisis at Paris, official opinion here maintains a circumspect silence. The North German Gazette refrains from giving more than meagre dispatches concerning developments in France. A frank expression of official hopes would have the effect of strengthening Boulangers party and weakening the opportunity of the French ministry. The government receives full advice respecting every phase of ministerial negotiations at Elysee. The latest dispatches indicate that Boulangers position is unshakable and that a reformed ministry is likely to be formed, which will adopt the Boulangers gospel of revanche and plans to attack Germany.
Whatever may be the character of the next French ministry the crisis has strengthened the German empire and the war spirit of the people. If Rouvier succeeds in forming a ministry, all prospects are that Boulangers ascendancy will be greater than if either De Freycinet or Clemenceau were premier.

MOVING AT A FAIR SPEED.
He could not see the lights in the cab in front of him until he was almost upon them and found it impossible to stop. As soon as he saw the lights he reversed his engine, applied the brakes, and his freeman, jumped off before the engine mounted the trestle. The collision was hard enough to send the passengers flying. The train was stopped. The road was badly blocked, and was open for travel during the day. Lawshe's body was brought to the city in a coffin in the afternoon.
The funeral will take place this morning at 9:30.

WHO HE WAS.
George Lawshe was a well known boy. He was as well known in Atlanta as any one, and was a brother of Mr. E. Lawshe, the jeweller. Before the war he was a member of the United States army, and on Green's Ferry street, which was then a country road, was located the family homestead.

MASSACHUSETTS joins Illinois in the proposition to regulate the telephone business. If these states will only be patient they may be relieved by Senator Reagan at the next session of congress. An interstate telephone commission would add fresh laurels to the brow of this distinguished statesman.

TEXAS is engaged in an excited prohibition campaign. A recent act of the legislature requires that after the fourth of July next, all retail liquor saloons must be without any blind, screen, or other device to hide their patrons from the public view. All pool, bagatelle, or tables of like kind are prohibited in retail saloons.

In reference to the Rosser-Sheridan episode the Kansas City Times speaks in the following mystical manner:

When fighting was on each did his share of it. To make money at one another, now, twenty years after they were shooting at one another, is to make their hair gray, if they have any, irreverent, and their scars if they have any, palpably out of place.

A column of such English would bring Lindley Murray from his grave.

SIR EDWARD THORNTON, who represents the English holders of Virginia bonds, contemplates bringing a claim against the United States on the ground that the general government became liable for Virginia's debt by dismembering the state and recognizing West Virginia as an independent sovereignty. Sir Edward is well up on British diplomacy, but he is a long way behind on United States law.

ILLUSTRIOUS tax dodgers are becoming common. After Wm. H. Vanderbilt died it was discovered that he had been in the habit of forgetting to return about ten millions of his taxable property. John Sherman has just been hauled up before the county auditor at Mansfield, Ohio, on a charge of holding back a large amount of property when he gave in his assessable values. Mr. Sherman denied the soft impeachment.

BREAKING ropes, struggling victims, and awkward sheriffs have suggested the propriety of supplying hanging by some more certain and more humane method of execution. Electricity is the favorite substitute. Several devices have been made by which the condemned will kill him instantly and without pain. The electric method has the advantage of neatness and dispatch.

THE installation of a new United States treasurer will involve the tedious formality of counting the cash. When the transfer was made from the last republican treasurer, Wyman, to his successor, Jordan, it was found, after counting some hundreds of millions, that there was a shortage of two cents. For a while it looked as if the count might have to be made all over again to discover the error. Mr. Wyman decided that he would prefer to pay the two cents out of his own pocket and call it square; but, fortunately, he was relieved of the burden by the discovery of the two missing coppers under one of the bags of silver dollars. The discovery deprived the democracy of what might have proved to be a powerful two-cent argument in the next campaign.

One Way to Build Up the City.

Among the important agencies engaged in building up Atlanta the Capital City Land Improvement company has won a place for itself in the front rank. It was organized, and commenced its operations, at a time when the general business depression threatened to seriously affect real estate. This tendency was counteracted by the vigorous and liberal policy inaugurated by the company. A good market was created for real estate, and to this more than to any other cause is due the fact that Atlanta passed through the period of depression without sacrificing any of her reality.

This result could have been achieved only by united capital and united effort, and one outcome of the judicious investments made by the company is the extensive real estate sale in the southern part of the city, advertised for Wednesday, this week. Here we have an illustration of the substantial benefits to be derived from co-operation, or pulling together in the right direction. Without concert of action much of the property now offered for sale would have been left in a rough, undesirable condition. Under the system adopted by the Improvement company liberal expenditures have been made to make the lots in every respect eligible for first-class residences. The purchasers will find the curbing, grading and sidewalks satisfactory. Street cars, gas and water are among the conveniences. The streets rank among the best, and the attractiveness of the locality, combined with the comparatively low prices ruling at the present time, will speedily make this a popular residence part of the city.

But this gives only a faint idea of the work of the company. Its operations in other parts of the city are on the same progressive scale, and it is already apparent that this line of policy cannot fail to rapidly develop real estate and build up the city. Such enterprises are of great practical advantage, and they deserve every reasonable encouragement. Atlanta will give good support to all such institutions as the Capital City Land Improvement company.

Four New Roads for Atlanta.

Arrangements were completed yesterday which insure beyond doubt the immediate change of the Marietta and North Georgia road into a standard gauge, its completion into Atlanta and its extension to Knoxville.

The Atlanta and Hawkinsville road is now contracted for and being built to Fort Valley, ninety-eight miles distant, and will be completed in less than twelve months.

The Georgia, Carolina and Northern has let the contract for fifty miles this way from Monroe to Chester, and within sixty days the line from Atlanta to Athens will have been let.

The Macon and Athens road, which reached Monticello yesterday and will be in Athens Christmas, will be extended to Atlanta from Monticello, where it will connect with the Marietta and North Georgia road.

These four roads are assured to Atlanta, and in less than eighteen months each of them will be running trains into depots in this city. What will be the effect on Atlanta?

The Marietta and North Georgia will make Atlanta the best point in America for furniture making. In no other city can hard wood and marble be delivered so abundantly and cheaply as into Atlanta over the Marietta and North Georgia. It runs through the best marble quarries in the world and through hills and mountains black with oak, walnut and cherry and with millions of birch—the American mahogany. It penetrates a marvellously rich section and carries us direct to Knoxville and the coal fields.

The wealth this road will pour into Atlanta cannot be estimated.

The Georgia, Carolina and Northern will give us a line four hours shorter to New York than the Air-Line—now here to Portsmouth under one ownership and from there to New York by the Pennsylvania Central. It opens directly to Atlanta trade the richest section of the Piedmont region.

As a prominent railroader says: "It traverses a section richer than that which makes the Georgia railroad so strong, and will have a better through business than the Air-Line road."

Mr. Hoke Smith says: "The road will be running to Atlanta in less than eighteen months."

The Atlanta and Hawkinsville goes through prosperous towns and villages all the way and it is admitted that for local trade it will prove the best road Atlanta ever built.

The road from Monticello will put another spoke in the wheel of Atlanta's progress and will bring closer to us a rich and growing section of the state.

Here then are four roads that will be added to us out of the revival of business and building.

What city can show as good results? Can any show better?

The truth is, never since she was founded has Atlanta been so prosperous or her future so hopeful as now. She has not made much fuss. She played with booms and boomlets when she was young but has now put them aside and settled down to business. She grows so steadily and has grown so long and got so used to growing she doesn't shriek every time she feels a growing pain. But she wishes her neighbors, one and all, a busy and prosperous year and she will try and be with them when we all get together next Christmas and see what the year has filled our stockings with.

"Free Whisky."

We have observed that when the Louisville Courier-Journal desires to arouse the prejudices of people whose purposes it does not understand and whose principles it does not understand, it utters a tremendous outcry against what it calls "free whisky." It permits a senseless declaration to stand in the place of reasonable argument, and seems to be of the opinion that it is hoodwinking the temperance people and prohibitionists. The suggestion of the Courier-Journal is that if the tax on whisky is repealed, the people will have a swing at "free whisky." Fortunately, however, the temperance people and prohibitionists are not fools. On the contrary, they are intelligent, as well as earnest, and they know that the present tax on whisky not only gives power and protection to a ring of distillers, but is a great incentive to the production of illicit liquor—in fact, the only incentive.

They know, moreover, that if the federal tax is repealed, as it should be, and the power of a corrupt ring of manufacturers destroyed, it is competent for the states to tax and regulate the manufacture. But if the state could have the collection of the tax, it would be under laws that are not oppressive nor un-American in their operations—and this is the great reform that the people demand.

The temperance associations and the prohibitionists are as profoundly interested in the repeal of the present whisky tax as any other class of citizens, and more so, for the moment the tax is repealed, the protected whisky ring will disappear, and the whole traffic will come under the influence of wise and timely state laws.

The federal whisky tax must go.

The Study of English.

Harvard is still leading the way, among colleges in this country, in the development of English courses. Harvard began the revolution when it made Greek and Latin elective. It has gone even further than this, and has announced additional courses in the English department.

Heretofore, these courses have been open only to special students. One is devoted to the Bible considered in its literary aspects; another to the English drama outside of Shakespeare; and another to general literature from Shakespeare to Dryden.

It is to be supposed that the literary study of the Bible will be confined to the King James version—the most remarkable example of English ever written. The style of this version, and even its verbiage, have entered more largely into the common life than any other piece of English, and it affords to students the most perfect writing to be found in our literature. Those who study English cannot afford to neglect the King James version of the Bible; and it is a pity that all our students and colleges do not introduce it in their literary course.

A Terrible Lesson.

The shooting of the incendiary agitator, Hoover, at Warrenton, will doubtless teach the enemies of law and order a salutary lesson.

In the north and west there are thousands of men like Hoover. They organize societies, take an active part in elections, and boldly threaten a social warfare in which dynamite bombs and torches will play a prominent part. Heretofore they have met with but slight opposition on the part of the authorities, and in some instances this policy of delay has led to serious results.

When men of the Hoover stripe go among ignorant people in the south, advising them to demand impossible things, and to burn and destroy everything within reach if their requests are not granted, they will find that every good citizen is for the time being judge, jury and executioner.

Our slow-going, conservative people deplore anything that savors of lawlessness, but the instinct of self-preservation will have its way. It is a bad thing to appeal to the shot gun in the interests of peace, but when we find men sneaking about in the dark plotting murder and arson we cannot afford to waste time in considering ways and means. Backshot should not be resorted to except in an emergency, but it must be admitted that under some circumstances backshot would fill the bill very satisfactorily.

The Warrenton affair will teach our public enemies that we are determined at all hazards to suppress anything like anarchy and communism in the south. If we can do it without bloodshed, so much the better; but if men will turn themselves into mad dogs they must expect to suffer the consequences. The Warrenton way of doing things is the very opposite of the Chicago method, but it will pan out better. Chicago waited until her Hoovers slaughtered her bravest policemen, and after a year's delay the murderers have not been brought to the gallows, and the matter is looming up as a problem. Now, there is no problem in the Warrenton affair. It was settled at the beginning, and settled forever. There will never be another Hoover in that locality. Here is a pointer for Chicago that is worth considering.

"Dixie" for May is now out and for sale at the news stands. The frontispiece engraving of Stone mountain, a view taken from a country church, two miles distant, makes a striking picture. Charles H. Wells describes the granite industry at Stone mountain in a graphically written illustrated paper, and W. W. Haversham, George B. Douglas, H. W. Pinckney and various staff writers and correspondents contribute articles of special interest. It is a good number.

It seems that the interstate commerce commission, having in its suspension of the long and short haul clause, will now try the enforcement of the whole law. We may be sure, then, that considerable damage will be done before congress has an opportunity of repealing the law.

It is said that Brother Blaine will make an Irish campaign. There is this much about it—the Irish know a fraud when they see it.

The English papers continue to print forgeries aimed at Parnell and home rule. The result will be a victory for home rule.

WHEN the communists strike Georgia they must come armed. Hoover appears to be a typical case.

If there are any Chicago anarchists that want to engage in business in Georgia, they are respectfully invited to come in.

PERSONS AND THINGS.

PHILIP D. ARMOUR, the pork prince of Chicago, celebrated his fifty-fifth birthday one day this week. He works just as hard as he did twenty years ago. The 125 men and boys employed in his outfit him a fine basket of flowers in his anniversary.

It is said in Washington that the president will soon appoint a superintendent of the coast survey to fill a vacancy which has existed for some time. Professor Kirtland, mayor of the mint General "Raidy" Smith and General Rosecrans are among those mentioned for the place.

MAJOR RATHBONE, who has been appointed consul general to Paris, is a man of medium height, full figure, with a bald head, gray mustache and florid complexion. He is about forty-two years of age. He is wealthy, and so is his wife. Both of them speak French fluently. Major Rathbone is fond of society, is a good waiter, and will shine in the ballrooms of Paris with a brilliancy becoming a consul general of the United States.

LEWIS F. ALLEN, of Buffalo, is a uncle of President Cleveland. He is a tall, lean man, not at all like his nephew in build. His sister was Governor Cleveland's mother. Mr. Allen has not conversed with Mr. Cleveland for four years. He considers the president a man of only ordinary ability, who "has lots of luck." He says that the president gets his obstinacy from his father. "The Cleveland," says Mr. Allen, "was an obstinate race."

THE sons of the late "Extra Billy" Smith, of Virginia, were lost of adventure. His oldest son, William Smith, was a midshipman in the navy and was lost in the Indian ocean. Austin Smith, the great bowie knife fighter, was killed at the battle of Fort Fisher. Peter Bell Smith was accidentally killed by a pistol shot after the war. James Caleb Smith and Colonel Thomas Smith, killed prominently as duellists. Or "Extra Billy's" children but three survive him, his daughter, Colonel Thomas Smith and Captain Frederick Smith, of New Mexico.

Reward Offered for Train Robbers. AT-TIN, Tex., May 21.—Governor Ross has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of each of the train robbers who participated in the affair at McNeil station, a few nights since. As there were thirteen robbers known to have been engaged in the attack, the reward would be $6,250. The governor's evidence he would receive twice as much in reward money as the whole gang secured in the robbery.

TOWN TOPICS.

Bright Bits of Local News Gathered Here and There About Town.

Mr. W. B. Board, secretary of the railroad department of the Young Men's Christian association, was once connected with an Omaha liquor house. He doesn't go around the country bragging about his wild outbursts, but he tells some very interesting stories which show that years ago he was "one of the boys."

"The most disgusting sight that I ever saw," said Mr. Board yesterday, "was this: There used to be a woman who regularly patronized the bar. She was not one of the lowest women of the town, but she did like a drink. One day she came into the bar, asked for a man and she ordered drinks. Both took gin. I put out the liquor. They drank. The man left a few drops of gin in his glass. The woman, after emptying her own glass, picked up that of her companion and drained the drop."

Speaking further Mr. Board said: "We have one hundred and sixty saloons in the city. A high license of $160 was adopted. Omaha now has 80,000 population and two hundred saloons. The saloons pay the city $200,000 a year and Omaha has one of the finest school systems in the world. There are forty policemen in Omaha. I believe there are sixty five in Atlanta."

Mr. Board says that if he were in Omaha he would be for high license, but that in Atlanta he favors prohibition. He is especially anxious to see the prohibition experiment given a fair trial.

By the middle of July, Mr. Mike Maher's part of the United States barracks contract will be completed. The other contractor has started on his part of the work, which is the officers' quarters and the hospital. Mr. Maher's contract is for four company quarters, band quarters, bake house and commissary. It is this building that will be completed first. It will be a long building, about 100 feet long and another 70 feet. The parade ground will be one of the handsomest in the country. Every day brings new evidence that the barracks will be a most attractive place when finished.

Governor McDaniel was in the city two or three days ago. His friends noticed that his face was considerably bronzed.

I was standing around in the sun, "said the governor in answer to a question, "I've been building a new house, you know, and I have been in the sun more than common."

The governor is in excellent health, and is enjoying his life. He has without effort secured a large law practice than he had before his election to the governorship. The governor is having such a good time that he doesn't care for any more politics.

The death of Mr. W. W. McKown, which occurred day before yesterday, was a severe blow to the many friends of that most excellent young man. It is said that Mr. McKown was at one time in a fair way to recover. But he dreamed he was going to die and at once lost all hope.

Yesterday the express company delivered to an Atlanta man five eight-month-old Plymouth Rock chickens, raised at Gainesville. Their combined weight was fifty pounds, which shows that Georgia is the best chicken country of the world.

COLONEL JACK HAYS.

A Typical Texas Ranger—His Regiment in Mexico.

In the life of Colonel John (Jack) C. Hays, being printed in the Belton News, the appearance of the Texas Rangers, as they seemed when in Mexico in the service of the United States, is described: After the capture of the City of Mexico, by the United States, the government of that city was placed in the hands of a military government. Jack Hays and his Texas Rangers, with their old-fashioned maple-stocked rifles lying across their saddles, the butts of two large pistols sticking out of holsters and a pair of gold six-shooters belted on their waists, making fifteen shots to the man. There are only 500 men in the regiment. Colonel Hays says there was a thousand in reality, and, summing them all up, they have only got 7,500 shots. The Mexicans have a more holy horror of them than they have of the evil saint himself. It is really surprising that men with such a reputation should be among the very best disciplined troops in the army in any way; but the great reason is that they are well drilled and drilled this evening. Almost an hour after some of them were quietly passing through one of the streets, when a crowd of Leperos gathered around them and commenced throwing stones, as a result of which was that in a few minutes there were several dead Mexicans lying in the street. Another eye witness of the entrance of the Texas Rangers in one of the Mexican cities gives the following graphic description of the scene: "The Texas Rangers, some standing up, some by the reverse flank, some face to the rear, some on horses, some on asses, some on mulestons, some on mules. On they came, rag, tag, and bobtail, pell mell, and belted with their pistols, and one covered with a slouched hat, that of an other with a towering cocked hat, a third bareheaded, while twenty others had caps made of the skins of every variety of wild and domestic beast. A noble set of fellows that these Texas lather-demons never unsheathed a sword in their countries' altar, young, vigorous, kind, generous and brave, they purposely dressed themselves in this garb to prove to the world that they were neither regiments, but Texas Rangers, as free and untrammelled as the air they breathe. Hays's men entered the city of Artes and approached the hills of the Montezumas, as it is placed the objects of universal curiosity. The sides of the street were lined with spectators of every hue and creed, from the major general of the North American army to the Mexican beggar. Quietly they moved along, not a word spoken; they seemed to convey that they were the objects of all observers. The trees of their own native forests would have attracted as much attention as they seemed to bestow upon the things around them. They seemed to say, 'We have seen men and been in cities before.' The difference between their city and the city of Mexico and that which I have described was a mere freak of their own. In each place they acted their part well. After entering the city they had proceeded some distance without being molested, when the population of the town became too great for a Mexican to withstand, and one standing on the sidewalk threw a stone at the head of one of the Rangers. As usual with a Mexican, he overrode his mark and took of the cap of his intended victim. A noble set of fellows that these Texas lather-demons never unsheathed a sword in their countries' altar, young, vigorous, kind, generous and brave, they purposely dressed themselves in this garb to prove to the world that they were neither regiments, but Texas Rangers, as free and untrammelled as the air they breathe. The trees of their own native forests would have attracted as much attention as they seemed to bestow upon the things around them. They seemed to say, 'We have seen men and been in cities before.' The difference between their city and the city of Mexico and that which I have described was a mere freak of their own. In each place they acted their part well. After entering the city they had proceeded some distance without being molested, when the population of the town became too great for a Mexican to withstand, and one standing on the sidewalk threw a stone at the head of one of the Rangers. As usual with a Mexican, he overrode his mark and took of the cap of his intended victim. A noble set of fellows that these Texas lather-demons never unsheathed a sword in their countries' altar, young, vigorous, kind, generous and brave, they purposely dressed themselves in this garb to prove to the world that they were neither regiments, but Texas Rangers, as free and untrammelled as the air they breathe. Hays's men entered the city of Artes and approached the hills of the Montezumas, as it is placed the objects of universal curiosity. The sides of the street were lined with spectators of every hue and creed, from the major general of the North American army to the Mexican beggar. Quietly they moved along, not a word spoken; they seemed to convey that they were the objects of all observers. ## ANOTHER BIG SALE.

THE CAPITAL CITY LAND AND IMPROVEMENT COMPANY'S SALE.

The South Side of the City—Twenty-nine Lots at Auction. What the Company Has Done to Improve Them—Easy Terms for All—Other Notes About the South Side.

Great interest is already being manifested in the sale of vacant property, which is to take place Wednesday afternoon. On that day the Capital City Land and Improvement company will offer the finest vacant property in the city for sale.

And in view of the fact that it is situated on the south side of the city, where property is in demand, and where so many improvements are being made, the interest becoming wide spread. The working man and the capitalist alike are interested in the sale; for the terms will be such that anyone can afford to buy.

The company will sell 8 lots on Capitol avenue, between Georgia avenue and Ross street. Three lots on Washington street.

Thirteen lots on Georgia avenue, between Washington street and Capitol avenue, and 5 on Crew street.

The beauty of the property lies in its superior situation as to schools and neighborhood, the extreme healthfulness of the surroundings, and to the fact that property by the side of it has advanced rapidly within the past few months.

The lots are all large, level, well shaded, and the grading and sidewalks are the best in the city. No expense has been spared to make them attractive and to make the sale one of the most successful of the season.

The lots will be sold without reserve and to the highest bidder, and no by-bidding will be allowed. To those who purchase and wish to build the Capital City Land and Improvement company will lend the money to build homes at 5 per cent interest, and allow the money to be repaid by installments. Anyone having stock of the company can give it in payment of property at a premium of 20 per cent.

As for Pryor, Washington streets and Georgia and Capitol avenues, nothing need be said. They are the choicest residence streets on the south side. They have long been considered as par with any streets in the city, and the great and fashionable residence upon those streets.

The sale will take place on the grounds on Wednesday afternoon, and it will be to the advantage of all who are interested in the real estate of the city to attend. Free transportation will be given to all.

ATLANTA MADE WORK.

Carriages Built at Home and Used by Atlanta Men.

A few years ago, and many thought that to get good carriages and buggies that the east was the place to buy them. That, however, is a thing of the past. The best vehicles ever sold in the city have been made at home and sold and warranted by that veteran carriage maker, John M. Smith.

Since Mr. Smith has been in the city he has sold some of his goods to almost every prominent man here, and he is now recognized as one of the great leaders in home manufactures and home goods. Among those who bought carriages of Mr. Smith ten years ago was Mr. A. E. Thornton. That carriage has done such service that last week Mr. Thornton purchased an elegant new Victoria of Mr. Smith.

During the week Mr. Smith also sold Mr. Ben Hill a beautiful extension top carry, and to Mr. Joel Hurt a very fine barouche. Thus it is that home industries can continue to thrive. They are upheld and supported by the leading men of the city, and the cry that is now going up is for more and larger manufactures in our midst.

With a dozen such men as John Smith to manufacture within the city the various articles that are needed at home, Atlanta would be much stronger and that far on her way as the manufacturing city of the south.

Colonel L. J. Alfred Writes.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for forty years of that time I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these troubles and got no permanent relief. About one year ago I grew much worse, the diseases assuming a more severe and dangerous form. I became very weak and lost flesh rapidly, until in November I commenced using Dr. Moziey's Lemon Elixir. I gained weight in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion were perfectly restored, and I now feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life.

At DeGives' Last Night.

The Goldberg comedy closed a successful engagement last night. They played to an appreciative audience throughout. Their performance show that Atlanta is not lacking in local talent. Sol Goldberg, in his wonderful solo better than any, also the songs and melodies by Misses Adelle and Rebecca Goldbergs. The evening closed with the ludicrous farce, "The Two Tramps," which proved to be exceeding mirth-provoking. The originality of the programme last night bespeaks success for the company.

AN IMPORTANT MUSICAL EVENT.

Grand Concert by the Musical Association Thursday Evening.

The third concert of this, the second season of the Atlanta Musical Association, under the direction of Mr. Sumner Salter, will be given on Thursday evening, 26th inst., at DeGives' opera house. On this occasion the entire programme will be rendered without the assistance of outside talent of any kind.

The society possesses a large number of unusually fine voices of all kinds and though not all of them will be brought prominently forward in this concert, still the public will have an opportunity to hear a good many of them, and several that have never been heard in public in Atlanta before.

There will be solo, a duo for two sopranos, with full chorus, from Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise," a trio, quartette, piano duo, part-songs and choruses, including a tenor solo and chorus from Mendelssohn's Ninety-Fifth Psalm, and the Medtgal from the Finale of the first act of Gilbert and Sullivan's new opera, "Rudyard."

Altogether the concert is likely to prove the most interesting and pleasing which the association has thus far given, and will at least serve to show the material of which the chorus is composed. They have already achieved greater success as a chorus than was thought possible for them by our best musical critics. It is especially gratifying to note the zeal and interest which both singers and director display in carrying on their work, and that ever since the organization of the chorus perfect harmony and good feeling has prevailed.

The Atlanta Musical Association has given more music in the year and a half that it has been organized than any similar society in previous years, and has well merited the support which it has received. It aims to afford the people musical culture and entertainment, and the entire community is welcome to its privileges and advantages. A city without such an institution permanently established, regularly organized, and systematically and methodically at work, is devoid of one of the most potent factors in the direction of general refinement and culture in the community.

The Musical Association is such an institution in Atlanta, and as such has our best wishes for a long life of usefulness.

The Hammond Type Writer.

This incomparable machine still leads all others in the number of sales made and the great satisfaction it is giving everywhere. Thousands are in constant use and the writers are daily displaced by it. The public finds that the Hammond comes nearer perfection than any other, and the sweeping assertions made against it by dealers in other machines show the extremity to which they are forced in order to effect sales of their out-of-style, complicated, cumbersome, imperfect type writers. A F. Coolege, state agent, 21 Alabama street, also has the largest and freshest stock of paper, carbon and ribbons, all colors and for all machines in the state.

Georgia's greatest wall paper man, M. M. Manck, says he don't paper 63 rooms in a week because his work is of a higher grade.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

Glance Over the Literary Field—Briefs About Books—News and Notes.

The south has for many years been somewhat sensitive to adverse criticism, especially its literary men and women are concerned. Such sensitiveness may be the result of provinciality, or it may spring from a knowledge that such criticism, in a general way, is spiteful rather than helpful. We are reminded of this by many remarks in a Kansas paper. The literary atmosphere of Kansas City is not very dense, but there is a good deal of solid sense in what our contemporary says. It is neither flattering nor agreeable, but it may be proved by a great many people. This much is certain, the south cannot have a standard of literary merit and the rest of the world another.

A contributor to the Southern Bivouac (late and county, deceased) writes to the Kansas City Times to inquire why the literary periodical in the shape of a purely literary magazine can long live and flourish in the south. The Times replies, with some degree of bluntness that there are two reasons: the want of money and the want of brains. There is no doubt that the publishing business cannot be carried on successfully without both; but our contemporary does not know the whole ground. There is a good deal of literary talent in the south, and the idea that the people will patronize a periodical simply because it is southern ought to have been exploded long ago. The Southern Bivouac was a very good magazine in its way, but it could not compete with the northern magazines. Southern readers will buy the best. There was some curiosity at the north in regard to the Louisville magazine, but its patronage at the north was comparatively small.

Our Kansas City critic goes on in his blunt way to say that the poetry produced at the south is poor and that the prose is not much better. Now, in the main this is true. The average of current poetry at the south is very poor indeed, but it is not very much worse than the average of poetry at the north. On the other hand, the fiction produced at the south by Mr. Cable and Miss Murfree, for instance, has strength and an originality that cannot be duplicated at the north.

The great trouble, as we believe, is the lack of literary development at the south. This is going on as rapidly as possible, and all the symptoms lead us to expect great results in the near future. Another trouble is that we are continually talking about "southern" literature in a sort of partisan strain that is out of place. Southern literature is a myth, if there ever was one. It is American literature or nothing.

BRIEF ABOUT BOOKS.

ENGLAND IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. By E. H. Lecky. Published by D. Appleton & Co., New York. Mr. Lecky brings before his readers the very form and body of the age he describes. He is scholarly, profound and imaginative. He has the industry of a scholar and a picturesque, flowing and elegant style. In his history of England in the eighteenth century Mr. Lecky has accurately portrayed one of the most remarkable periods in the world's annals.

AN INDEX TO THE WORKS OF SHAKESPEARE. By Evangelina O'Connor. D. Appleton & Co., New York. Every reader of Shakespeare should have a copy of this work. It gives references to topics to notable passages and significant expressions; brief histories of the plays; geographical names and historical incidents; sketches of the characters, and explanations of allusions, obscure and obsolete words and phrases.

JOHN SEVIER. By James R. Gilmore. D. Appleton & Co., New York. Governor Sevier's life is a stirring chronicle of the life of a pioneer, soldier and statesman.

REUNION AT MOSCOW. By John Bell. D. Appleton & Co., New York. This is a pleasant narrative of travel in Russia. The author made the best of his opportunities in behalf of the cause, and the result is a very entertaining book.

SOCIAL SOLUTIONS. By M. Godin. John W. Lovell company, New York. An up in the air, speculative study, by an honest but impractical reformer. M. Godin has not added to the world's stock of knowledge.

WHO IS JOHN NORMAN? By Charles Henry Hackett. Is perhaps attracting more attention than any novel of the season. It is Mr. Hackett's first story, but it is so strong and original that its readers will be eager to hear from the author again. There is a rare treat in store for those who have not already read "Who is John Norman?"

News and Notes.

Mr. Frances Hodgson Burnett intends to read most of the summer in Europe.

It is said that Prince Napoleon is writing a reply to M. Gambetta's paper on Napoleon I.

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps is working on something which she says will be a "woman's suffrage novel."

Mr. Deane has told the story of his literary partnership with James Rice in a preface prepared for the forthcoming library edition of their novels.

James Low & Co. will publish at once, "Copyright, National and International," with some remarks on the position of author and publisher, by a publisher.

"Book Chat" in its monthly index to poetry in the magazines marked Easter poems with stars and St. Valentine's day poems with daggers.

Henry Irving and Frank Marshall are engaged upon an acting edition of Shakespeare with very full stage directions. Gordon Browne, son of T. B. Browne, is in charge of the illustrations.

Mr. R. E. Cleveland has taken charge of a special department of "The Magazine of American History," her signature being attached to her editorial contributions.

Walt Whitman's next volume of poetry is to be brought out in the fall under the title "Drum-Taps," appropriate alike to the season and to his own poetic life.

H. W. Mabie, who is writing the "Authorized" life of Helen Hunt Jackson, will visit southern California in August to get material for the closing chapters of his book.

A collection of her social studies has been arranged by Louise Chandler Moulton, and will soon be published by Roberts Brothers, under the title "Conversations and Our Neighbors."

The discovery of an unrecorded epilogue by Charles Lamb, has added nothing to our store of treasures. It was written by him for a comedy by Henry Siddons, and is a very poor story.

Henry T. Wharton has prepared a new and enlarged edition of Sappho, including an autotype of a newly discovered fragment of Sappho, and a number of reproductions of drawings by Sappho, which will be found in the June "Scribner's Magazine" to come.

Many a reader will grieve when these delightful epigrams come to an end.

"The College and the Church," which is an account of the papers published in the Forum under the title "How I was Educated," and as the "Confessions" of leading members of the different religious denominations.

Harvard's letter, referring to the dedication of "Our Old Home" to ex-President Pierce, was brought a recent sale of autographs, at Boston, by Thomas Bailey Aldrich, for $80. At the same sale, Mr. Aldrich brought an autograph copy of Ralph Hunt's "Abou Ben Adhem" for $86.

Wain announces that he shall carry his autobiography no farther than 1875, and that he has concluded to abandon the work entitled, "Our Fathers Have Told Us." "The more," he adds,

"that I perceive the new generation round us cares nothing about what our fathers did or said."

Sir Austen Henry Layard is preparing for publication, by John Murray, at London, his early adventures in Persia, Susiana, and Babylonia, including an account of his residence among the Ekhizyri and other wild tribes, before the discovery of Nineveh.

Mr. William H. Riedel says, on authority, that the author of the recent anonymous book of verse called "The Heart of the Wood," is Mrs. Thomas Sergeant Perry, (formerly Miss Cabot), the wife of the well-known essayist and reviewer.

Julian Hawthorne, who is, perhaps, the only literary athlete of his day, has written a paper on "College Boat-Racing" for the June "Century." It will be remembered that the Tribune once printed over Mr. Hawthorne's name, a clever and picturesque criticism of a Yale-Harvard race.

Mr. William Cushing writes to the Publishers' Weekly to deny the report that he has given up the publication of his "Anonymus." He has already collected some 21,000 titles, and says he will be glad to receive information in regard to the authorship of any anonymous book.

The third and fourth volumes of the admirable Riverside edition of Browning have just appeared and the two concluding volumes will be brought out about June 1. The publication has been timely and the volumes have been heartily welcomed, not only by Browning enthusiasts, but by most people of good literary taste.

The first draft of Mr. Cable's new story, "Au Large," is just completed. It is a sequel to "Caracul" and "Grande Pointe," and will be twice as long as either of these tales. Mr. Cable will soon go to the southern part of Louisiana, to research the scenes which are included in the plot of the story, and then it will receive the "final touch."

A new detective novel, by Anna Katharine Green, is announced for immediate publication by P. Putnam's Sons. It is entitled "The Mystery of the Green," and has, we believe, already appeared in a syndicate of newspapers. The same publishers also propose to bring out an early day a series of tales by two writers, under the title of "Told at Tuxedo."

The festival in honor of Rabbinism, which was held last Monday at Mendon, where the creator of "Pantagruel" was for many years cure, will be repeated this year and hereafter be made an annual occurrence. It will take place on the 9th and 30th of May, and the exercises will consist of literary and poetic competitions, an art exhibition, a cavalcade, concert, banquet, etc.

Rev. A. Smythe Palmer, author of "A Word-Hunter's Note-Book," has been appointed editor of the proposed "English Dialect Dictionary," and an appeal has been issued for funds to complete the undertaking. It is estimated that $25,000 will be required. Professor Skeat has been made secretary and researcher, and the syndicate of the Cambridge University Press will undertake the printing and publication of the dictionary.

The first volume of Ticknor's handsome new series of paper covered novels contains "The Story of Margaret Kent." The book is thoroughly attractive in print and binding, and the series of thirteen numbers promises to be a valuable addition to the supply of inexpensive summer reading. Future titles include "Gonn," "A Reverend Idol," Henry James's "Tales of Three Cities," and "The Story of a Country Town."

Edward Atkinson's Boston address on the "Margin of Profit" is to be published immediately by G. P. Putnam's Sons. The volume will also contain the reply of E. M. Chamberlain, of the Labor Union; Mr. Atkinson's rejoinder to that reply; various analyses of the sources of the product, and the division of the product of labor and capital, and a chart showing the present division of profits.

About a year from this time the fourth volume of Schouler's "History of the United States" will be ready. It will bring the narrative down to the close of the Mexican war. This announcement is of much interest, as the work is one of the most important fruits of that return to historic studies which the rooting out of slavery permitted to the generation that survived the war.

The universal language called "Volapuk" is said to be already in use by 10,000 people of various nationalities. Its grammar can be learned in an hour. A full account of this new tongue will be given by Richmond Walker in the June number of the American Magazine. The same issue will also contain a sketch of Mrs. Logan, contributed by Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, and including some lively anecdotes of the period when General Logan was serving in the field.

The London Truth makes a statement that the literary department of the London Times for some years in Deland's time was "left very much in the hands of an individual, long since deceased, who looked it in a scandalous manner." It adds that when one of Dickens's later works had been very favorably noticed by him "he was rewarded by a present of the manuscript, which he acknowledged in a very gushing letter; but before the work was out he had sold it for £250 to a well known American publisher."

At the high school for girls in Cork the ceremony of electing a Rose Queen took place a fortnight ago. Decked with wild roses, this royal maiden was enthroned on a fur-covered seat under an arch of moss and evergreens and surrounded by attendant maidens and 100 other school companions. She was then presented with a gold cross sent by Mr. Ruskin as an annual gift, besides a volume of poems handsomely bound. Six other books from Mr. Ruskin were then placed before her for presentation to the maidens whom she loved best.

Book Chat says that a novel which cannot be laid down until the story is finished can safely be said to be a work that will not live. It may be popular, it may be graphic and bright, yet it lacks some essential for a permanent life. Consider the great novels of the past, that are living today, and see if this can be said of any one of them. Who would be willing to read Dickens, Thackeray or George Eliot through at one sitting? The delight we find in them is in quietly living with the characters, learning their joys and sorrows, becoming more intimate with their peculiarities, loving their personality, joying in their success, sympathizing in their failures.

The London Saturday Review, in some respects a rather narrowly British periodical, pays a judicious tribute to American writers when it says: "We have long felt that in the art of writing short stories, an art which is more difficult than it seems to the idle reader—American authors are greater proficient than their English rivals." It acknowledges, too, the superiority of our magazine literature, and declares that "no intelligent reader of the lighter American and English magazines, in which short stories are numerous, can fail to feel how much more original in theme and more artistic in treatment is such work in the former than in the latter."

Leslie Stephen's conception of the novelist of the future is an interesting one. He pins his faith not on the psychological school nor to the writers who love starting incident. "The novelist of the future," he says, "will excite our sympathies; he will be a thorough realist and idealist; he will tell us an exciting story; he will not bore us with abstract conclusions, nor yet will he shrink from making comments on what he sees before us; he will not take morbid views of life; he will be before all things interesting, for unless he forces us to read, he will be useless in his writing; and he will be instructive. Till he comes, he will not be heard on those who give us entertainment now, for entertainment is one of the most valuable things in life. I should be glad that the novelist comes, and I trust it may yet be in my time."

The Fall Mail Gazette at last announces the result of its competition in regard to the best novel. "We did not," it says, "expressly limit the competition to English novels, but our readers have been patriotic, and hardly a single foreign book appears in the lists. The result may be taken, therefore, as embodying the current opinion of the day on English novels as best novels." The best historical novel, Scott, "Ivanhoe." 2. The best humorous novel, Dickens, "Pickwick." 3. The most imaginative romance, Rider Haggard, "She." 4. The best novel with a purpose, Charles Reade, "Never Too Late." 5. The best tale of sea-faring life, Marryat, "Midshipman Easy." 6. The best tale of country life, George Eliot, "Adam Bede." 7. The best sensational novel, Wilkie Collins, "Woman in White." 8. The best tale for boys, Dicks, "The Wonderful Story of the Three Boys." 9. The best Irish novel, Lever, "Charles O'Malley." 10. The best Scotch novel, Scott, "The Heart of Midlothian." 11. The best novel of all, Thackeray, "Vanity Fair."

Lord Lytton in his speech at the Royal Literary Fund dinner, the other evening, referred to the failure of a corporation of similar aims. "Many years ago," he said, "my father, and his eminent contemporary, Charles Dickens, conceived the project of forming among their brethren a craftsmen's mutual aid society which, unlike the Literary Fund, was to be independent of support from the general public. That society, which came to an untimely end, they called 'The Guild of Literature and Art.' One of its main achievements was to be the creation of a sort of Arcadian retreat for authors and artists unable to afford a needed rest from their labors. To this my father contributed a piece of land. Then he wrote a play was performed by distinguished artists and authors, and its proceeds were employed in building out that land a rural home for invalided veterans of literature and art. Well, so far as I know, from that hour to this, nothing has been able to induce a single representative of literature and art to inhabit the home so hopefully prepared for their reception."

A private letter from a person mentioned by "The Fall Mail Gazette" as a "distinguished American man of letters," is thus quoted in that journal: "We raised about $600 for that lecture on the other day. It amuses and somewhat angers me, this talk of the Americans not taking care of the old fellow. The fact is that millions are at his disposal—that is to say, I think he has more millions and rich people who look after him than any one I know. For instance, Mr. George W. Childs wrote me the other day that he has a friend in Camden who sees that he suffers for nothing. Mr. Carnegie, who gave $500 for his box at the lecture the other day, stands ready to see the bard through on any and all occasions. There are plenty of other people of limited and unlimited means, who are in constant communication with Whitman, and Philadelphia and New York journals, who see that his wants are fully supplied. A rich Philadelphian told me today that he had given him himself, off and on, a thousand dollars. Barrough sends him money pretty much every year; and all this talk of the necessity of raising money by subscription abroad, with the idea that he won't be taken care of at home, is ridiculous."

The most painful slight that can be presented to father and mother is to see their little one slowly wasting away by the drainage of the system, from the effects of teething, day by day growing weaker and weaker, unable to be nourished from the condition of the stomach. If these parents would only use Dr. Biggers' Huckleberry Cordial they would soon be happy from the results obtained. It is a pleasant preparation and at once relieves the child and older ones from all bowel troubles.

We present some testimonials from some of the best people in the country, stating that they owe the life of their children to the use of Dr. Biggers' Huckleberry Cordial as to convince all mothers to give it at least a trial.

LIVE TOPICS IN GOTHAM.

JULIAN RALPH'S LETTER ON THE WEEK IN NEW YORK.

The Tremendous Rush at Castle Garden—An Export on Immigration Who Has Had Charge of Millions of Greenhorns—Curious Features of the Human Tide From Europe.

New York, May 21.—[Special Correspondence.]—Henry J. Jackson has not made much stir in the world. In official circles his name has been well known here for many years, but throughout the country fame has not given him his deserts. He is a short stout man of middle age, with genial blue eyes, a complexion ruddy and wholesome, a head that is growing bald and a mustache of modest dimensions and brickish hue. His position is of such importance that were he an oriental among orientals he would be called something like "the bearer of the keys of the west," or "the keeper of the gate of liberty." He is in the humdrum practical way, we call him the superintendent of Castle Garden. He has had that post thirteen years, and in that time has welcomed and taken charge of three million, one hundred and sixty-five thousand immigrants, or nearly as many persons as there are in London, or in the cities of New York, Vienna and Paris combined.

My gracious! What a man he is. For twenty years he has studied immigration as a science, and studying that is studying the nations of the earth; it is studying human nature; it is studying the greatest revolution man has ever undergone. He knows the peoples of the earth, as you or I know a colored man or a Hebrew, when we see one. He points you out all about him—what he is good for, what sort of a place he comes from, whether he is apt to have money or not; all about him and his native country, and what is going on there and why he is leaving there.

"We are having a rush now," he says. "The new comers for the year will foot up 400,000 at this rate, or 30,000 in excess of the highest recent numbers. Why are they coming in such numbers? Oh, because we are having good times here. Do you know that Castle Garden is the best, most sensitive and perfect barometer of our country's condition that there is? It has always been so. Look at the figures. This year 400,000; dull years like 1884 and 1885, 300,000 and 200,000. After the panic, in 1873, was it not the tide fell to 81,000, and to 68,000 and in 1877 to 54,000. It was just so during the war and after the panic before the war. The people who are here keep their friends and relatives in Europe continually posted as to the money and labor market, and the general conditions here, and it is quite evident that just now they are predicting a long season of prosperity for us."

It would be a wonder if Mr. Jackson were not an interesting man, for, beyond all question, Castle Garden is the most interesting institution we have. It is interesting in the greatest variety of ways. In the first place it is an old fort, a massive pile of brick and masonry built just as it was built to beat the British, and beating them it is today, a great deal more effectively with its port-holes boarded up and its cannons taken away and its huge foot-thick doors swung open to all creation, than when it was the martial man. It is an old fort and it looks like a military prison. It is all open to the roof and its floor is raised off into four pens. When you see it filled with crude and helpless humanity, driven here and there, shouted at, controlled, marched about, cross-questioned or else lying all about the floors and settees with bread and cheese to eat and bundles and trunks to look after, if it does not make you stare nothing will. And when you see the friends of the immigrants, their brothers, the priests and the aldermen and the contractors, clad in broad cloth with their wives in silks and with carriages outside in the park, coming down to carry off the greenhorns as they were themselves carried off ten or twenty years ago—well, if that does not set you to thinking nothing ever will. Your thinking apparatus will never get you a living if that does not stir it up.

Mr. Jackson and I went to a window in the wall and looked down at the garden the other day. It smells better when you have a closed window between you and it. The Umbria had just come in from England with 300 immigrants, and a French steamer had brought 900. That was a cue to set Mr. Jackson talking about how immigration has changed since twenty or twenty-five years ago when the Irish were the main supply, and sent 165,000 out of a total of 230,000. Now the Germans lead with 73,000 last year, against 36,000 Irish. But we are continually tapping new countries now-a-days. This year there is a remarkable emigration from Finland. Robust, strong, former fellows are these Finlanders, all bound for the far west. At home they are under the Russian rule, a virtuous, hardy population of a million and a half souls, without the right of self-government. They have long been ruled by agents of the St. Petersburg throne and taxed unmercifully. They prefer to start anew among us and they are bringing their wives and families and quite a little money. They look a little like Russians in their long tailed coats and flat round caps, but they are swarthy and black haired, and they wear boots of soft, unpolished, untanned leather, made more like bags for the feet. The Scandinavians are making a stamped to America, Norway and Sweden are sparsely populated, but their people are coming at the rate of 40,000 a year. They appear to bring more money with them than any other nationality.

Nothing is more important or more difficult to get at than this question of who brings money and how much they bring. Mr. Jackson says that every conceivable way of finding has been tried, but the authorities always have to fall back on vague conjecture. You can't ask the immigrants. Imagine what you would say or think or do to, while you are waiting at a train in a railroad depot, some one asked you how much money you had about you. But this is how they guess. You see all the people from the Umbria are passing from the first left hand pen to the second, and all from the French steamer folks from the first right hand pen to the second. They pass on either side of a great hollow square of desks. The first clerks they come to take each one what is his or her name, age, birthplace and destination. The second set of clerks is at the money-changers' desk. They change all the foreign money into yankee scrip at the current Wall street rates. In that way, they see what they call the "hoozie" of each nationality. They say that the Scandinavians have the most money, the Germans next, and so on down past the Austrians and the Poles to the Irish and Italians. The Mennonites were a solid lot; they have pretty well come coming now. They fled along most plentifully between 1872 and 1882 and are all out in Dakota and Nebraska farming. They came from the rich Russian grain country around the Black sea. They were protestants and once what like our quakers in their aversion to war and the bearing of arms. Russia invited them to come out from Germany and guaranteed them immunity from military service, but upon a change in the constitution ten years were given to them in which to leave Russia or do military duty. The majority sold out and came here.

Mr. Jackson pointed out a number of tall, thin, rather brigandish fellows from the French steamer, and said they were Sicilians now coming here in great numbers to engage in fruit raising in southern California. They are several notches above the average peasantry of Italy. The Italians are being swarmed here and are still being paroled out like cattle among the men who have loaned money to them and have indentured them to work for them until they are out of debt. However, the pedroni business, the swarming of children, is believed to have been entirely broken up. The Italians are doing exactly what the Chinese were accused of, and in the main, unjustly. They are scraping up every cent in order to get back to Italy, and either the remainder of their days or until their money is used up and they shall be forced to return here and make another little pile. They calculate to live a year on fifty dollars. One of the commonest sights of late has been to see an outgoing steamer carrying back hundreds of these people, often still wearing the very clothes they came in. The Italians say unique in this respect. They are the only immigrants who come here for what they can carry away.

But they aren't the worst, that is the least desirable immigrants we ever had. That proud distinction belongs to the oppressed Jews of Russia. Mr. Jackson never says an unkind thing about anybody, but he yields a sigh of relief when he says that tide has run dry. Even their own co-religionists, the American Hebrews, were inclined to go back on them. It was about five years ago that the world was shocked by the accounts of the cruelty and oppression the Jews were suffering in Russia. Something started them to this shore and they came pell mell. They expected to live as objects of charity and avers to working—a filthy, ragged, ignorant, complaining, discontented horde. They would have had to turn right about face for the Hebrew Aid society, which was formed here to care for them and equipped with half a million dollars. Seven hundred of them were kept in idleness on Ward's island for a time. A lot were sent to Vineland, N. J., to till the soil. Everything failed, and eventually nearly all were sent back and the supply cut itself off short.

A GLIMPSE OF CASTLE GARDEN.

But let us stand at the window and look down at the throng pouring in from the barges which have emptied the ships. What a vast tidal first sight of the country these people all get. They have sailed up the grand and picturesque harbor with its green and rustic shores and have halted at the battery, now radiant with spring blossoms and gaudy with beds of gay flowers. The park is full of people sunning themselves, the air is laden with floral odors, the harbor is bustling with steam craft, the noble Hudson spreads away before them and the statue of liberty holds its torch aloft above their heads.

We have been the swarm of men and women filing into the old fortress; we failed to notice the doctors at the gates; they are scanning each immigrant closely. One sees a cripple, and commands him to step aside; another sees a pregnant woman, and finally, too, must be questioned later. The crowd pushes on and is squeezed between a railing and the desks.

Each immigrant must answer the questions the clerks put to her, and her answers must all be written down, for the commissioners of emigration are obliged to look after their newcomers for one year after they land, and they propose to know something about them. Then the immigrants are pushed along to the desks of the money-changers and get Uncle Sam's money for Kaiser William's or Franz Joseph's, or King Humbert's. But it is surprising how many say, "We changed our money at home." It seems that now they can get greenbacks at any European port. Next they all go to the desks of the railroad ticket agents. A few have made no provision to get to their destinations in the west but very many bring with them orders for exactly the tickets they want, having bought the orders of railway or steamship agents in Europe. Once past the railroad desks all are herded again in a second great pen.

Here they must wait until afternoon to be put on board railroad barges and carried over to Jersey City or Hoboken, to the Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio or Erie wharves or up town for the New York Central trains. Over their heads four great American flags are waving, and very aptly indeed, somebody has cut out of a poster a great figure of Uncle Sam with his arms widely extended in the act of welcoming humanity. It is pasted on a board and stands on top of a closet like a compressed and flattened statue. A great trade is going on at each where bread, cheese, beer, ham and beef are for sale at fairly reasonable prices, and a most enterprising barber is going about inviting bearded men to go to his spider web and be shaved. Thinking it essential to a proper introduction to the country, most of them go. In the meantime, a man with the most tremendous lungs—lungs that would get him a fortune as the footer for a Bowery museum—is high in air on a desk calling out "Ma-a-y-r-y Madigan," "Israel Ja-a-a-cobs," "Pe-e-e-e-r Pilsky," and so on for an hour. These are the names of immigrants whose friends and relatives are waiting for them in a room outside the fort.

Some women employed for the purpose are silently moving through the crowd looking for any who are about to become mothers. At least a hundred a year of this sort, who are not wives, are found in the Garden. Their state-ments are taken and it is almost invariably found that the men who wronged them are in Europe and have paid their passage to America and promised to join them soon. All these weeping miseries are sent back to their homes in Europe. So are the cripples for the paupers and the chronic invalids who have no means and no plans that will keep them from being charges on the people.

I knew of a young man, a German, who came here, and after two years of ill-luck and misery, scraped together money enough to go home with and gladly shook the dust of America from his shoes. I asked Mr. Jackson if he came across many such.

"Very few, indeed," was his answer. "Most immigrants have burned their bridges behind them and would not be welcomed back. They are ashamed to return, even if they could, and they will work harder here to get a living and to succeed than they ever would have done at home."

THE PARTY THAT WANTS THE EARTH.

The Rev. Father McGlynn is at work with might and main for the land and labor party, but he cannot be persuaded to take a cent for his pains. He will not even touch a penny of the proceeds of his lectures. He turns all that he earns into the treasury of the new party. How he lives is something of a mystery. His former parishioners raised a small prize for him, but he is a poor man and prefers to be so. He loves the poor and wants to be one of them. Bayard Barnes is the brains of the party; that is to say of the Henry George movement. The reader has doubtless never heard of him, because it is the aim of his existence to keep out of print. Those who have read Henry George's book without being able to find a practical line in it, as the subject is clear, that is, as the subject permits. Barnes is the secretary. He was converted to the theory by George's book, and he, in turn, converted Dr. McGlynn and got him to adopt the movement as his mission. Barnes is a middle aged man of scholastic attainments and literary mind. He is a fascinating talker and earnest worker. He is the Barnes of the late firm of Swinton, Barnes & Co. Swinton which published that interesting little book, "The way of the earth" movement is much more considerable than the majority think. Its treasury is kept supplied with money contributions from England, Scotland and Ireland, as well as from all over this country. It has issued a call for a state convention and will put a state ticket in the state this autumn. Henry George may be nominated for some office, not. It is scarcely likely though. He is busy with his weekly paper, The Standard, and is not disposed to devote to in even more lenient comfortable circumstances. JULIAN RALPH.
